SLAYE MARKHAUES.—A very interesting report has just been solunited by the convention of the South Caroline Episcopal church, at their seasion in 1888, is respect to the marilage of aleves. The fellowing is the anbetance of the decision errived at by the committee: The relation of husband end wife is declared to be of divine institutian, and to be equally binding on the slave as only master. The injunction of the Saviour, forbidding the separation of Eusbard and wife, is obligatory on the master, and every mester should so regulate the disposal of the slave as not to infringe the divina injunction. Voluntary abandoment on the part of e married slave oeght to come within the same rule as in the case of a free person; but when the ebandoesment is involuntary, and caused by cincumstances without the control of the parties, the refusal to allow a second marriage would often produce mach evil and hardship; but in giving its sanction to such second marriage would often produce mach evil and marriage, the convention would do so in the quallfield lagguage applied by the Apostle to cases of e legal divorce.

A singular performance of the wind is now daily to be coliced on the hill sides near Moute Crieto; air currents strike a enow drift, and plarcing it, catch the dry disket, bringing them forth and risleg in the shape of water spouts at sea. Frequently, a number of the spirale form and unite at a height of from thirty to forty feet, when they separate and fall like water egray. This phenomenon, while it resembles the water spout as perfectly as could be, the more estucishing, and it certainly belongs to the most remarkable order of natural wonders.
